

Press Release

October 28, 2024

The Surrey Eagles are thrilled to announce their expansion into the Junior Prospects Hockey League (JPHL). This exciting development marks a significant milestone for our organization, further solidifying our commitment to fostering young talent and promoting them to new heights. With the addition of our two new JPHL teams, the Surrey Eagles are confident in providing even more opportunities for young athletes to develop their skills and pursue their hockey dreams right here in our amazing City of Surrey. Thanks to Surrey's continued support in youth sports and essential infrastructure, this new academy is possible.

One of the most significant benefits of this expansion is the ability for players to stay and practice in the City of Surrey. Young athletes can now stay, study, and train in their own city, surrounded by the support of their community and the exceptional resources provided by the City of Surrey. This means they no longer need to go outside the city to pursue their hockey aspirations.

The JPHL is renowned for its competitive environment and focus on player development, making it the perfect platform for aspiring hockey stars. The league's academy-based platform ensures that players receive comprehensive training that goes beyond the ice, focusing on skill advancement, sportsmanship, and character building.

We are excited to embark on this new journey and look forward to the continued success of the Surrey Eagles both on and off the ice. Stay tuned for more updates and information about our JPHL teams and upcoming events soon.
